Dear Friends,

My first assignment with Bread for the World back in 1999 was to lead the organization’s effort to urge the U.S. Congress to provide deeper, broader and faster debt relief for the world’s poorest countries – Bread’s contribution to the Jubilee 2000 campaign. A small coalition of church groups — Church World Service, the Episcopal Church, the Methodists, the United Church of Christ, Presbyterians, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops and Catholic Relief Services — and Oxfam America came together and focused our efforts on introducing and passing bipartisan legislation that would break the cycle of debt and promote poverty reduction.

It was a tall order. No one thought we could do it, even we ourselves. Poor country debt was an esoteric topic, too hard for most people to understand. The problem seemed so big. The odds were stacked against us.

But there was something of God in this effort and the Holy Spirit was at work. Our efforts succeeded beyond our wildest dreams. We not only passed legislation. We in fact changed U.S. policy, and the policies of other rich countries and international financial institutions. And poor people in some of the poorest countries in the world are reaping the benefits of those efforts, even today.

That assignment showed me the power of faith to change the course of history and improve the world. This is the same opportunity and challenge that San Francisco Theological Seminary has today.

We live in a polarized and partisan world, where differences seem to matter more than the things we hold in common. The church itself suffers from these same divisions, and has a difficult time connecting with people who are seeking deep expressions of faith and life. The church can do better, and seminaries have an opportunity to help the church meet the challenge.

The prophetic ministries of the 21st century are ministries that foster conversation, interaction, common action and uncommon community among people and groups that do not know each other, do not understand each other, and do not agree with each other. We need church leaders who are capable of bringing people together across the political, ideological and cultural divides, and of bridging those gaps.

We need to design seminary education in a way that provides the intellectual underpinnings for that kind of leadership — the Biblical understandings, the lessons from church history, and the theological and ethical basis for such ministries. We need graduates who have been challenged to develop the emotional intelligence, spiritual formation and practical skills that would enable them to be the kind of religious leaders our polarized, parochial and partisan world so desperately needs.

This fall SFTS is embarking on a season of change. We are beginning to consider how we can transform our educational model and the curriculum that supports it in order to connect with the sea of changes taking place in the world today. SFTS needs to be a place of hope and energy for a transformed church capable of healing a broken world. We should be a place that helps the world and the church move beyond the divisiveness and corrosiveness that are needlessly tearing us apart. Graduates of SFTS should be equipped and empowered to be the kind of religious leaders who can bring people together and motivate them to participate in God’s mission as it is now unfolding.

I pray that we will be able to look back on this time of uncertainty and transition for the Church and recognize how God was working in and through SFTS to do a New Thing.

When I embarked upon my journey at SFTS one year ago, I knew without pause that I had been blessed with a great professional opportunity. And the chance to work in an environment where I could openly express my love for Jesus Christ was deeply profound. It’s wonderful to speak the words, God, Christ, Jesus, Holy Spirit, Praise Him, Our Father and more without fear of being “written up” by a human resources staffer for expressing my religion and faith in the workplace. Hallelujah for SFTS, where God is my co-worker, and is loved and praised throughout our community!

As I have become deeply immersed in SFTS culture, knowledgeable of its history and an ardent supporter of the exciting plans for the future, I marvel at the focused commitment of our leadership, faculty, staff and students. And I have unearthed the best kept secret in town; that SFTS is a magical place, with stellar academics and a loving heart for social justice. Now is the time to spread the word, far and wide, about all that SFTS has to offer!

In my role as vice president of communications, I have a job that is creative, meaningful and gives me great joy. I lead a talented team of individuals who love to tell stories ... your stories! Using various mediums including Chimes magazine, marketing and promotional collateral, website, video, photography, social media including Facebook and Twitter, advertising and radio and television news, we are the folks who are working with passion to tell compelling, interesting and heartwarming stories that will bring heightened visibility to SFTS nationally and abroad.

We are currently engaged in a branding initiative that will inform us if we’re on the right path with our messaging and outreach efforts, or if we need to make a course-correction. As with all things, it is important to re-examine our strategies and methodologies to insure that we’re not merely keeping pace, but actively leading the way. We have cast a wide net, and we’re excited about what the future holds for SFTS.

It is my daily prayer that we hold true to the meaning of the Gospel, and that our hands and hearts continue to be guided by our blessed Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Grace and peace,

Dr. Kay Carney

Rev. Neal D. Presa (M.Div. ’02) became the 16th member of the San Francisco Theological Seminary community to be elected moderator of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly in June in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Presa, a Filipino-American, was elected by majority vote over three other candidates, including fellow SFTS alum Rev. Randy Branson (M.Div. ’71). Among the other SFTS community members who have been elected moderator of the PC(USA) General Assembly is Rev. Bruce Reyes-Chow (M.Div. ’95), whose two-year term ran from 2008-10.

Besides serving as pastor of Middlesex (N.J.) Presbyterian Church, Presa is affiliate assistant professor of preaching and worship at New Brunswick Theological Seminary. A noted ecumenist, Presa has provided leadership through the World Communion of Reformed Churches (WCRC) and its predecessor, the World Alliance of Reformed Churches (WARC). He has also chaired the PC(USA) General Assembly Special Committee on the Heidelberg Catechism, was vice chair of the Presbyterian Mission Agency Board (formerly the General Assembly Council), and held positions as vice moderator and moderator of the Presbytery of Elizabeth.

Here’s what he has to say about his experiences at SFTS and how they have helped him negotiate the challenges facing the PC(USA) and church in the 21st century.

“A key characteristic of theological education that I experienced at SFTS when I was an M.Div. student from 1999-2002 was the community life that welcomed freedom of thought while tethered to the Reformed tradition,” Presa said. “I look at my time at SFTS with great delight as it was a community that lived with the tension of the breadth of the theological spectrum — this is where the Church needs to be.”

Presa’s quest for unity and cooperation has become the polestar of his role as moderator. Leading up to the election, Presa was faced with conflict when it was revealed his vice moderator running mate, Rev. Tara Spuhler McCabe of National Capital Presbytery, had signed a marriage certificate for a lesbian couple in Washington, D.C., where same-sex marriage is legal.

Presa said that as a church officer, he holds to the PC(USA) Constitution, which recognizes marriage as between a man and a woman. “But I’ve known Tara for 10½ years and though we disagree, we live with this tension because of our relationship,” Presa said. Days after their election, McCabe resigned over this divisive issue.

“I think our focus now has to be on how to develop a community that allows dissenting views but still allows that person or persons to belong to the community.”

very Thursday at noon at San Francisco Theological Seminary a new worship experience is explored. The SFTS community gathers for worship four times a week and Thursdays are reserved for what has emerged as weekly “Worship Lab.”

Started in January 2012 to add flexibility and innovation to weekly worship, the Thursday chapel services at SFTS implement experimentation to enrich and complement worship experiences, while honoring the living word of God and the Reformed tradition.

“As we talked about the best way to serve the community, and what the purposes of chapel and chaplain’s assistants were, we decided that in addition to providing a space for worship, the chaplaincy program was for learning,” explains Master of Divinity senior Charles Wei, who was a chaplain’s assistant last year. “This meant that we had to be able to experiment, to see what different kinds of things could work in a worship service, and what things might not. Worship Lab became a showcase of sorts, in which the people that attended chapel could see a variety of things that could be possible in a worship service.”

“Seminaries are laboratories for incubating religious leaders who have been called by God to encourage and challenge communities to live out the Good News of Jesus Christ.”

President James McDonald

Over the past year, the Worship Lab services have included experiencing the Spirit through percussion instruments and praying to God through motion. Other themes have been timed for days of remembrance such as Domestic Violence Awareness Month, reflecting on how Jesus stood with those who were victims and targets of violence, and National Coming Out Day. During Welcome Week, the Worship Lab service explored a theme of Eat, Pray, Love: As community members prayerfully walked the Geneva Terrace labyrinth, they would eat grapes, pray with someone, and experience God’s love by receiving a blessing.

Min-Hee Kim is a second-year Master of Divinity student from South Korea who serves as a chaplain’s assistant. She says that differences among this year’s four chaplain’s assistants — just like differences within churches — open doors to think beyond one’s own realities and gifts.

“When I understand something, I tend to visualize that concept with images from my context,” Kim said. “For example, the percussion Worship Lab was designed with the purpose of relieving stress of the seminary community since I’ve felt that all members of SFTS were feeling some stress from their work, including me. What surprises me is that I can concentrate on...”

New SFTS director of Advanced Pastoral Studies committed to nurturing "communities of practice"

By Holly Woolard

As a pastor nearing the 10th anniversary with his first congregation after seminary, Rev. Virstan Choy needed more. His ministry had reached a point where he needed a fresh dash of theological stimulation and colleague feedback. He found what he was looking for through the San Francisco Theological Seminary Doctor of Ministry program.

It’s been more than 20 years since Choy first began his studies at SFTS and he returns as director of Advanced Pastoral Studies, which includes oversight of the seminary’s D.Min. program. For those who find themselves in situations similar to that which Choy encountered while serving as pastor of the Chinese Community Church in Sacramento, Calif., from 1975-86, and then as associate executive presbyter for the Presbytery of San Jose from 1986-91, he is sensitive to your needs for renewal and retooling.

“It came to the point where my approach to ministry skills development just didn’t do it anymore,” said Choy, who had sought help through journals and books, lectures and workshops. “What I was looking for was something more disciplined. I needed new wisdom and advanced skills in leading and cultivating leadership in the congregation, not just some new program ideas.”

In his new position at SFTS, Choy’s primary roles are twofold: Continue to develop the renowned D.Min. program that for more than 50 years has helped church leaders refresh their calls, update professional skills and stir the wellspring of creative ministry; and provide innovative ways to nurture pastors and others engaged in the practice of ministry who are hungry for a ministry boost, but may not qualify for admission to the D.Min. degree program or have the interest or time to write a dissertation.

Being an SFTS grad, Choy is especially appreciative of the legacy left by predecessors Henry Adams (1961-69), John Hadsell (1970-81), Walt Davis (1981-2000), Warren Lee (2000-08), Lewis Rambo (2009-10) and Scott Sullender (2010-12). “I want to be a faithful steward of what has been entrusted to me — not just the program, but the people and the partnerships as well,” he said.

From 1992-2000, Choy served as director of field education and integrative studies at SFTS, which allowed him to work closely with Master of Divinity students. He’s still involved in supporting the ministries of several of those former students, including parish associate work for Rev. Veronica Goines (M.Div. '95) at St. Andrew Presbyterian Church in Marin City, Calif., and co-teaching in the McCormick Theological Seminary Executive Leadership Program with Sarah Moore-
Nokes (M.Div. ’03). He’s excited about building similar ministry-long relationships with APS students. Choy is “committed to looking for ways to innovate and enhance the D.Min. program.” He is equally cognizant that his duties as director of APS must involve expanding certificate and other non-degree education, especially for those who do not meet current accreditation standards for entry into the D.Min. program. This leads him to approach his new job with “bifocal strategic vision.”

During his studies at SFTS, Choy benefited from the stimulation and support from his colleagues in ministry. The “community of practice” he experienced at seminary, being a part of a collegium group, became an ongoing source of discipline, encouragement and accountability. The intentional way the SFTS D.Min. program has been structured, with various emphases and tracks, makes it attentive to diverse “communities of practice” in ministry.

One local “community of practice” is the Racial Ethnic Advanced Pastoral Skills (REAPS) group, a fellowship of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) ministers.

Tradition of commitment to advanced studies programs

San Francisco Theological Seminary has been committed to post-graduate education since 1928, when 16 active pastors, mostly SFTS alumni, gathered weekly for graduate studies. The seminary’s Advanced Pastoral Studies program, designed for working pastors, was launched in 1961 and SFTS began offering the Doctor of Ministry degree in 1970.

Throughout history, the seminary’s advanced studies programs have been marked by the ecumenical and international character of the student body and faculty. The Doctor of Ministry program combines academic excellence and a pragmatic focus in order to develop scholar pastors who are creative in their ministry contexts.

As a world leader in Christian graduate-level education, SFTS is proud to offer several concentrations in its Doctor of Ministry program. The majority of students enroll in the Multidisciplinary emphasis. Other areas of emphases include Pastoral Care and Counseling and Pastor as a Spiritual Leader.

The SFTS faculty is also deeply committed to International Feminist, African American Theology and Urban Ministry emphases. SFTS plans to offer courses in these areas, although the programs are under review with the hope of continuing these emphases in the next few years.
Cultural Crossings: A Tour of Korea

(“How are you?”)

By Kay Carney

It was the trip of a lifetime. For SFTS president, Rev. Dr. James McDonald and his wife, Rev. Dr. Dean McDonald, the invitation to travel to Korea offered a welcomed opportunity to go where no “McDonald” had ever gone before!

This is not the first time SFTS leadership have traveled to Korea to participate in the annual Hanshin conference, a symposium established for Korean Christian pastors. For four decades, SFTS administrators and faculty have made the trip. But for the McDonalds, this was their maiden voyage.

After a 10-hour plane ride and 16-hour time difference, the McDonalds hit the ground running. Traveling by KTX high-speed rail from YoungSan Station to Hanil University & Presbyterian Theological Seminary in the city of Jeonju, President McDonald preached at the university’s morning workshop service — “The Mighty Mustard Seed” based on Luke 17:1-6. That same evening, the McDonalds boarded the train for Seoul.

Fast forward. Their weeklong visit was enriched with a visit to Hanshin Presbyterian Church and a meeting with Rev. Dr. Yong Kyu Kang (D.Min. ’96). President McDonald spent quality time at the church and preached the ceremonial changing of the guard. at the 7 a.m., 9:40 a.m. and 11:30 a.m. services. Hanshin is a large church with 4,000 members. McDonald was also a featured lecturer at the annual Hanshin-San Francisco Theological Seminary Symposium, where most of the lectures were conducted in Korean. McDonald’s sermons and lecture, however, were given in English and translated into Korean.

McDonald’s presence and participation in the conference was highly anticipated. His image appeared on banners, posters and other materials. It was a heartfelt welcome. “The graciousness of the Korean people and their hospitality was unparalleled. Dean and I have never experienced anything like it! It’s like we were royalty. They couldn’t do enough for us. We were very humbled by the warmth and generosity of the Korean people,” said McDonald.

McDonald presented a lecture on Faith and Public Life before a capacity crowd of more than 500 conference attendees. He was asked by Rev. Dr. ChangBok Chung, president of Hanil University in Jeonju, to preach the closing worship service before a crowd of nearly 1,000. Chung earned his Doctor of the Science of Theology degree from SFTS in 1978 and was named 2012 Distinguished Alumni.

There were grand musical and theatrical performances held at the conference center that would rival Broadway. From musicals to classical string quartets, from a commissioned chamber orchestra choir to Korea’s version of Elvis, the entertainment was extraordinary. “The talent was unsurpassed and the quality of the performers was equal to what you would see at the Met or on Broadway,” McDonald said. “I especially enjoyed hearing the men’s quartet sing, ‘There is Nothing Like a Dame’ in Korean.”

Traveling to see the historic sites of Korea with several of the country’s religious leaders and dignitaries was deeply inspiring, as they bore witness to elements of the nation’s war-torn past and the amazing progress the country has made, both economically and socially. “The Korean War was devastating, and the country has been rebuilding over the past 60 years. Theirs is a remarkable story, with a remarkable testament to the Korean people,” McDonald said.

Among the other sites visited was the Confucian Academy at the UNESCO World Heritage Site; Gyeongbokgung Palace where they viewed the ceremony of the changing of the guard, established in the early 15th century; a visit to the “Tin Can” church, constructed of tin and turned on its side—a large mega

She’s Got The Whole World in Her Hands

By Kay Carney

Rochelle Rawls-Shaw is taking on the world! The SFTS Master of Divinity student is interning at the United Nations in New York, a position she hoped for but was not sure was going to materialize. Her prayers were answered and the obstacles that appeared in her path that would have thwarted the internship opportunity were overcome.

Rawls-Shaw is interning with the Presbyterian Ministry at the United Nations, whose mission is to share information about how the United Nations addresses humanitarian issues and concerns that affect all of humanity. “This internship is exposing me to a world much larger than the one I read about in the classroom. It is enabling me to see the value of what I have learned about ministry from professors and theologians, and it has taught me the value of theological reflection as well as the value of education,” stated Rawls-Shaw.

When Rawls-Shaw arrived in New York, the wonders of the world literally opened up before her. She has been in the same room with national and world leaders and attended conferences where heads of state have spoken. While attending the UN General Assembly, Rawls-Shaw listened to an address by Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, president of the Islamic Republic of Iran, as well as leaders from Egypt, United Kingdom, Japan, Libya, China and Germany.

Rawls-Shaw also heard speeches by Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, and Mahmoud Abbas, Chairman of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and President of the Palestinian Authority regarding membership at the United Nations, “I have come to realize how much all human beings are connected, and I have met people and established relationships with people from all over the world,” said Rawls-Shaw.

Rawls-Shaw’s most memorable experience so far was a front-row seat at a high-level discussion on ending child marriage, featuring Archbishop Desmond Tutu.

The opening statement was given by UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon and the moderator was Ann Curry of NBC News. She was especially moved by a young woman who spoke of how her life was changed when her father supported her getting an education and not forcing her to marry at 9 years of age.

“I felt so very different at this event, like I belonged there. I felt like this was a gift from God, that He had chosen me so I could be the hands He’s using to help with this issue,” she said. “I talked with the moderator, Ann Curry, and thanked her for her compassionate questions, and before we parted, we embraced. God is awesome...and so is my internship!”

Rawls-Shaw’s internship has validated her perspective that ministry exists beyond the walls of the church. “God the Creator is the God of all human beings, including those who gather together inside a church to worship, as well as those who worship through other means, outside of the church. God has revealed himself to me once again, through my internship; for which I am humbled and deeply grateful.”

“Unconference” allows the Spirit to set theme and invites everyone into the conversation

By Tad Hopp

San Francisco Theological Seminary was blessed to serve as the host site for the third annual “Unconference” (UNCO). More than 30 people traveled from near and far to attend the three-day conference held July 30-August 1 on the SFTS campus. Many of the participants were SFTS alums who were excited to make their way back to campus to participate in the conference. Seminary staff and students also participated.

UNCO is unique because unlike other conferences, it has no set theme. The conference participants decide what they would like to discuss and then break out into small groups to delve into topics they feel are most important to them. Everyone at the conference assumes a leadership role either through suggesting a topic or moderating a discussion. This also ensures that everyone is invited into the conversation.

“The conversation at UNCO created space for the Spirit to nudge us in the direction of the church that is yearning to be born,” said Rev. Jim Kitchens, interim pastor at nearby Calvary Presbyterian Church in San Francisco. “As one of the older participants in the conversation, I was struck by the deep faithfulness of the Millennials who were at the heart of the gathering. If we can create worshiping communities and ministries that embody some of the ideas we talked about at UNCO, then I’m very hopeful about the future of the church in general, and the PC(USA) in particular.”

UNCO started on Monday afternoon with a brainstorming session where participants were asked to write down the topics they wanted to elevate for further discussion. That was followed by dinner and an opening worship service where participants shared stories of the journey that led them to the conference and why they were excited to be here.

Participants spoke about needing a break from traditional church and that UNCO represents a different, much-needed conference model. Some expressed the feeling that UNCO feeds something inside them that they aren’t able to get anywhere else. All the participants were thankful that UNCO exists. At the close of the opening worship, participants were encouraged to write down the “yes” and the “no” that they were struggling with in their lives. They were then invited to share their responses with a prayer partner.

The next day, participants were divided into different breakout groups for engaging and stimulating conversations about the topics that seemed to have the most appeal. For this year’s conference, those topics were:

✦ Bivocational Ministry
✦ How to Do Membership/Church Differently
✦ Minister and Artist: Outside Walls
✦ Church as Incubator
✦ Cooperation Among Churches
✦ Progressive Theology and the Church
✦ Alternative Christianity & Interfaith Dialogue

These topics were discussed at length in lively sessions all day Tuesday, and were revisited on Wednesday to discuss what to do with the ideas that were developed around these topics. At the closing worship service on Wednesday, participants were commissioned with pieces of rope to be reminded of the work ahead and how it will be challenging, but necessary.

Sarah Chancellor, an incoming junior at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary, said that she left UNCO “with a stronger sense of my own call and a wider view of the church. I know that the church must change and grow but I’ve had a hard time visioning that change. UNCO helped bring some of that into a little bit more focus for me.”

For more information about UNCO, including detailed notes from each of the breakout sessions, visit the UNCO website at www.unco.us.

Tad Hopp is a second-year Master of Divinity student who participated in UNCO.
The Laramie Project

The student group SFTS Welcome presented a staged reading of The Laramie Project in October. One of the most performed plays in America today, The Laramie Project serves as a memorial for Matthew Shepard, who was murdered in Laramie, Wyo., 14 years ago. In October 1998, Shepard was kidnapped, severely beaten and left to die, tied to a fence on the outskirts of Laramie. His murder, caused by actions arising from homophobia, was later painted as a “drug deal gone bad.” Five weeks later, Moisés Kaufman and fellow members of the Tectonic Theater Project went to Laramie, and over the course of the next year, conducted more than 200 interviews with people of the town. From these interviews they wrote the play The Laramie Project, a chronicle of the life of the town of Laramie in the year after the murder.

Several SFTS students who participated in the local production included Laura Nelson, Susan Pierson, Bentley Stewart, Stephanie Ryder, Denia Segrest, Dori Kay Hjalmarson, Tad Hopp, Min-Hee Kim, Terra Pennington, Chris Schilling and Barbara West. Among the guests in attendance was Rev. Dr. Janie Spahr (M.Div. ’70, D.Min. ’87), a proponent for same-gender marriage and the ordination of lesbians, gays, bisexual and transgender people. SFTS Welcome is a community group at the seminary that supports the inclusion of LGBT in the church. Other activities of SFTS Welcome have included drafting and proposing a campus inclusivity policy that went into effect in 2011.

PC(USA) General Assembly

Several SFTS students got their first taste of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) General Assembly last summer in Pittsburgh, where the seminary was well represented with alumni, administrators and President Jim McDonald.

Among the students who attended were Jeff Ferguson, Cameron Highsmith, Tad Hopp and Jamieson Prevoznak. Highsmith, who was a Theological Student Advisory Delegate, wrote about his GA experiences in a blog.

Highsmith, who is “Presbyterian through and through,” was perplexed that Southern California presbyteries offered an overture about leaving the denomination and taking church property with them. Highsmith wrote “Our main concern ended up being, ‘Well, what about the people that don’t want to leave? What will they do for their congregation? Should they just be left out in the cold?’” Highsmith used his blog to praise his classmate: “I was really proud of my fellow TSAD from SFTS, Jeff Ferguson, who stood up and gave an impassioned statement for the redefinition of marriage because he’s an evangelical conservative that believes in equality.” Highsmith’s blog posts included several mentions of generational gaps. “It was obvious that we are somewhat of a divided church on these big issues,” he wrote. Kickball

Picturesque Bouick Field, encircled by towering redwoods on the SFTS campus, has become a popular place for students and their fellow theologians from the Graduate Theological Union to play kickball. For the second time in six months, SFTS students invited their colleagues from the GTU to cross the bay for a game of kickball earlier this fall. Even SFTS President Jim McDonald has joined in the fun.

SFTS community members have always found ways to stay active. There’s the annual Seminary to the Sea hike from San Anselmo to Stinson Beach at the beginning of the academic year, club soccer teams, casual Frisbee and football, and there’s even a gym on campus. History shows that SFTS moved from San Francisco to San Anselmo in 1892 in part because of Marin’s healthy environment needed to promote the development of mind and body. The SFTS Bulletin magazine reported in 1922: “Physical development is not neglected. Athletics are encouraged. Gymnasium is required. The Seminary believes that to reach (ones) efficiency as a minister one must be a virile (person).”
Rev. Dr. James Noel of San Francisco Theological Seminary was honored as the Graduate Theological Union Distinguished Faculty Lecturer in November in Berkeley, Calif.

The GTU, one of the largest partnerships of seminaries and graduate schools in the United States, celebrates its 50th anniversary in 2012. Each November, the GTU faculty honors a distinguished professor who embodies the scholarly standards, teaching excellence and commitment to ecumenism that define the GTU. Nominations are considered by the Council of Deans, which selects the Distinguished Faculty Lecturer.

Noel is the H. Eugene Farlough, Jr. Chair of African American Christianity and Professor of American Religion at SFTS. His lecture was entitled “Black Religion in the Atlantic World during the Age of Revolution: Excavating the ‘Sublime.’”

“I am very surprised, humbled and excited about receiving this honor,” Noel said. His lecture related several things that are never brought together in most discourses about modernity: revolution, the aesthetic category of ‘the sublime’ and black religion. Noel used the paintings of William Turner’s with Edmund Burke’s A Philosophical Enquiry into the Sublime and Beautiful to support his research.

The lecture was held at the Pacific School of Religion chapel. Dr. Naomi Seidman, Koret Professor of Jewish Culture and Director of the Richard S. Dinner Center for Jewish Studies (GTU), was the respondent. A reception was held at the Badé Museum afterward.

Noel is a widely popular professor at SFTS and the GTU and also graduated from both institutions. He earned his Master of Divinity from SFTS in 1975 and completed his Doctor of Philosophy from the GTU in 2000. In addition to his responsibilities as a professor at SFTS and the GTU, Noel is director of the GTU’s Black Church/Africana Religious Studies Program. He also serves as interim pastor at New Liberation Presbyterian Church in San Francisco, is an accomplished painter and 7th dan Tae Kwon Do Master.

His published works include Black Religion & the Imagination of Matter in the Atlantic World (Palgrave 2009) and The Passion of the Lord: African American Reflections. Noel’s play, The Black Experience in Poetry and Song, has been performed nationally and internationally.

“What I notice is that black people and their religions rarely constitute items of theoretical reflection in academic discourses on modernity and post-modernity,” Noel explained. “The nature of the West is never illuminated by what blacks undergo by the West — its cultural identity is self-generated. Blackness remains marginal even when such categories as alterity, hybridity and otherness are invoked. This lecture will offer me the opportunity to extend what I began reflection on in Black Religion & the Imagination of Matter in the Atlantic World and clarify the research I will be doing on my sabbatical this Fall semester by sharing my thinking with my distinguished GTU colleagues.”

Noel challenges boundaries whenever they threaten to obscure or resist truth, and students experience this in the classroom. His interdisciplinary method of scholarship aids students in investigating the ways in which culture creates and transforms individual experiences, everyday life, social relations and power.

Among the other SFTS professors who have been named Distinguished Faculty Lecturer are Rev. Dr. Philip Wickeri in 2009 and Rev. Dr. Lewis Mudge in 2003.

Rev. Dr. Jim McDonald and Rev. Dr. James Noel have contributed to a unique commentary that helps preachers identify and reflect on the social implications of the biblical readings in the Revised Common Lectionary.

Preaching God’s Transforming Justice is the second of three volumes of a collection of essays that concentrates on the themes of social justice in the weekly texts. It also highlights how those themes can become teachable moments for preaching social justice in the church.

McDonald is president and professor of faith and public life at San Francisco Theological Seminary. Noel is the H. Eugene Farlough, Jr. Professor of African American Christianity at SFTS. McDonald and Noel also contributed to the first volume of Preaching God’s Transforming Justice last year.

They are among 90 authors who have provided commentary on biblical texts. Their essays are designed to help preachers and congregations develop a deep and broad theological vision out of which to interpret the social world.

In addition to providing commentary for each day in the lectionary calendar, the series features 22 Holy Days for Justice. These days are intended to enlarge the church’s awareness of God’s call for justice and of the many ways that call comes to the church and world today. The days include Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Earth Day, World AIDS Day, International Women’s Day, Cesar Chavez Day, Yom HaShoah and Juneteenth.

McDonald, who came to SFTS in 2011 after 13 years with Bread for the World, has written on World Food Day, one of the Holy Days for Justice. McDonald suggests that preachers can encourage their congregations to engage in comprehensive efforts to end hunger by directly providing food for hungry people, pressing for patterns of growing and using food that benefit local communities, taking action designed to change systems of food production and distribution, and advocating healthy and responsible eating.

“God’s presence is assured when we do justice, not because our actions make us better people, but because doing justice changes our relationship with others and transforms the world in accord with God’s purposes,” McDonald said. “This is why ending hunger is sacred work.”

Noel begins his essay by discussing judgment, justice and righteousness. “Justice occurs when God delivers the poor and oppressed from their plight and in so doing renders them justified or righteous,” Noel writes. Noel also points to prominent metaphors of slavery and freedom in Paul’s letters, cautioning against downplaying their eschatology in favor of individualistic interpretations and applications.

Noel preaches at New Liberation Presbyterian Church in San Francisco and regularly includes social justice issues in his sermons. To hear Noel preach, go to: http://www.sfts.edu/faculty/noel/sermons/index.asp

McDonald regularly preaches throughout the West. To see where he is preaching, go to: http://www.sfts.edu/news/view_event.asp?ID=260
Pastoral care and counseling workshop explores applications of spirituality

San Francisco Theological Seminary hosted a workshop entitled “Meeting at the Borders of Spirituality” in October, exploring the role of spirituality in pastoral care and counseling. Attended by 50 people, the workshop was sponsored by the Pacific Region of the American Association of Pastoral Counselors.

Three SFTS faculty members were featured in the workshop: Dr. Scott Sullender, associate professor of pastoral counseling, Rev. Laurie Garrett-Cobbina, Shaw Family Chair of Clinical Pastoral Education, and Rev. Dr. Sam Hamilton-Poore, director of the Program in Christian Spirituality and assistant professor of Christian spirituality.

Hamilton-Poore noted that while spiritual direction has a long history in the Christian West, it has experienced a resurgence of interest in the last 40 years in the United States. Hamilton-Poore oversees the seminary’s renowned Diploma in the Art of Spiritual Direction program.

Garrett-Cobbina traced the history of CPE, including the amazing life of Anton Boisen. She noted that spirituality in the CPE world is always “tethered to the other, to the one who is suffering.”

Sullender pointed out that the emergence of certified pastoral counseling, pastoral counseling as a specialized ministry, is a product of the 20th century in the United States, and parallels the rise of psychology as a behavioral science and counseling as a new professional discipline. He said that in the world of pastoral counseling, spirituality often takes the form of theological reflection, particularly sensitivity to the client’s operational theology, those assumptions and “beliefs” that clients actually live by, rather than those beliefs that they affirm on Sunday mornings.

As the audience discussion turned to the subject of theodicy, Sullender said, “People come to pastoral counseling because their theodicy is broken.”

Dr. David Augsburger, retiring senior professor of pastoral counseling at Fuller Theological Seminary, spoke on “Reflections on Spirituality.” He stressed that there are three types of spirituality: unipolar spirituality, bipolar spirituality and tripolar spirituality.

He defined unipolar spirituality as “spirituality from within,” a spirituality that finds its roots in the awakening of the self. Bipolar spirituality is “spirituality from above,” a spirituality that is rooted in the Divine-human encounter. Tripolar spirituality is “spirituality from below,” a spirituality that is experienced among people. Further, he argued that the best or most mature kind of spirituality was the tripolar spirituality because it involved all three dimensions: self, God and other.

“I think the day was helpful, a helpful beginning, to exploring the various expressions or models of spirituality,” Sullender said. “It also highlighted what we, all of us in the caring ministries, have in common, which is a sensitivity to the spiritual needs of persons, and a recognition that spirituality is often not at the edges of the individual’s struggle for wholeness, but at the center of that process.”
Continuing education event on prayer offered by faculty

San Francisco Theological Seminary faculty members presented “Knocking on Heaven’s Door. Prayers in Old and New Testament Texts and their Reception in History and Praxis” in October at Alexander Hall.

Besides community members and Bay Area pastors, the packed hall included members of the SFTS board of trustees who were in town for their fall meeting.

The lecture provided insight and discussion on the following questions:

✦ How have prayers changed over the course of time (Old Testament, New Testament, History of Christianity and the 21st century)?
✦ Are prayers something specifically Jewish-Christian?
✦ Does addressing God as “Father” go back to Jesus?
✦ Can we still pray the Psalms today?

The panelists were Dr. Annette Weissenrieder, associate professor of New Testament, Dr. Annette Schellenberg, associate professor of Old Testament, Dr. Christopher Ocker, professor of history, and Rev. Dr. Sam Hamilton-Poore, director of the Program in Christian Spirituality and associate professor of Christian spirituality.

Rev. Dr. Jana Childers, professor of homiletics and speech communications, is the immediate past president of her professional association, the Academy of Homiletics, and continues to serve its executive committee. At the group’s annual meeting in Chicago, Ill., in November, she chaired the Nominating Committee and coordinated a Saturday morning seminar on “Embodiment and Creativity in Preaching.” Her seminar presentation was entitled “Body: The Spirit’s Message Board.” Childers is also committed to the Western Association of Schools and Colleges. This year she is enrolled in an advanced training course as she prepares to serve on a visitation team next spring. This will mark her eighth visit to a sister school as an evaluator. For two of those visits she served as chair of the visitation team. In addition to preaching locally, Childers is working on a book project with Richard Ward of Phillips Theological Seminary. She was honored during the Associate Church Press annual awards banquet, receiving an honorable mention along with Michael Linvale and Ted V. Foote, Jr. for their “Benedictory” column in The Presbyterian Outlook. The ACP is the oldest and largest Christian press association and stages yearly judging for its “Best of the Christian Press Awards”.

Rev. Dr. Virstan Choy, director of Advanced Pastoral Studies and associate professor of ministry, preached at First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, as part of that congregation’s observance of Theological Education Sunday in September. He offered workshops on “Leadership in Times of Transition and Transformation” at the Western National Leadership Training Event in Jackson Hole, Wyo., in October, and enjoyed reunion time with alums, Doug Melius and Tim Mooney. In November, he joined colleagues from other PC(USA) seminaries in a consultation of Doctor of Ministry program directors hosted by McCormick Theological Seminary. He will meet with Asian American Presbyterian Pastors at their annual retreat in Watsonville, Calif., in December. Also participating will be alum, Joseph Lee, executive presbyter for San Jose Presbytery.

Rev. Dr. Sam Hamilton-Poore, director of the Program in Christian Spirituality and associate professor of Christian Spirituality, has traveled to South Sudan the past two summers as part of an ecumenical teaching team that reached out to church leaders from the Presbyterian Church of Sudan (PCOS) and Episcopal Church of Sudan (ECS). When he returned, he preached at First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, in July. He co-led the 2012 Preachers Retreat with Dr. Anne Wire “Studying and Praying the Gospel of Luke” at SFTS July 23-26. In September, Hamilton-Poore began service on the Committee on Ministry of Redwoods Presbytery and performed musically at the Festival of Arts event at Christ Lutheran Church, Fairfax. In January, he will teach during the Diploma in Art of Spiritual Direction program, including a new course on “Contemporary Issues in Spiritual Direction: Culture, Context, and Social Location.” He is also scheduled to serve as plenary speaker for the annual conference of the Intercollegiate Peace Fellowship of Mennonite Colleges and Universities in February at Bluffton University, Ohio. The theme of the conference is “Spirituality and Shalom: Living at the Intersection of Faith and Justice.”

Dr. Elizabeth Liebert, dean of the seminary and professor of spiritual life represented SFTS at the Association of Theological Schools Chief Academic Officers’ Meeting and Biennium held in Minneapolis in June. She also participated in the Hispanic Summer Program’s program for deans and presidents held at the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico. In October, she attended a retreat on discernment for the “Spiritual Enrichment for Everyday” series hosted by Preston Hollow Presbyterian Church of Dallas, Texas, and an Adult Sunday School presentation, also for Preston Hollow Presbyterian Church. On October 22, she led a day-long workshop for spiritual directors, introducing them to the Experience Circle, a tool for expanding the ability of spiritual directors and supervisors to attend to the experience of those they assist in spiritual direction.

Rev. Dr. Gregory Love, associate professor of systematic theology, led a workshop on Science and Religion for The Zephyr Experience at Zephyr Point Presbyterian Retreat Center, Lake Tahoe, in July. The conference annually brings together over a hundred participants. In September, he led a conference for pastors on his book Love, Violence, and the Cross: How the Nonviolent God Saves Us through the Cross of Christ (2010). Over 20 pastors, certified lay pastors and lay people from Cascades Presbyterian spent two days studying together at the Shalom Center at the Benedictine Sister’s Abbey in Mt. Angel, Ore. Love also taught a four-week adult education series on Paul’s Theology in Romans 5-8 at Lafayette-Orinda Presbyterian Church, Calif., in September and October. Love presented two series at First Presbyterian Church, Burlingame, Calif., this fall. He taught a three-week adult education series on religion and spirituality in American culture. “Is Being Spiritual Enough? Spirituality, the Church, and the Christian Life” looked at the latest Pew survey on people claiming to be “spiritual but not religious,” the strengths of this trend and the potential problems. In December at First Presbyterian Church, Burlingame, Calif., Love will teach a two-week series on the changes happening in the Presbyterian Church, looking at reasons and consequences of churches leaving the PC(USA). Love led 12 students in the Certified Lay Pastor program of the Presbyterian of San Francisco this fall. He provided an in-depth study of Christian systematic theology from the perspective of the Reformed tradition. The program involved reading texts in systematic theology, writing papers and discussions.

Rev. Dr. Eugene Park, the Dana and Dave Dornsife Professor of New Testament, participated in the IASACT program at the Chinese University of Hong Kong in June as a mentor to 15 junior scholars from various Asian countries representing diverse academic disciplines in humanities and social sciences. He gave a series of lectures on the New Perspective on Paul at the First Presbyterian Church, Burlingame, in September and another set of lectures on Paul’s life and theology at the First Presbyterian Church, San Rafael, in October. His article, “Matthew’s Treatment of the Infanticide by Herod” has just been accepted for publication in the Catholic Biblical Quarterly.

Dr. Annette Schellenberg, associate professor of Old Testament taught a class on “Basic Theological Questions in the Old Testament” in the Advanced Pastoral Studies summer program. In November she gave two papers at the SBL meeting in Chicago: one on the book of Jonah and one on characterization of the sage as king in Wisdom literature.

Dr. Annette Weissenrieder, associate professor of New Testament, presented a paper at a conference on Revelation at the University of Frankfurt, Germany. The paper was entitled “Bilder zum Sehen – Bilder zum Hören? Über die Grenzen von visuellem Bild und Sprache als Ekphrasis in der Offen-
She has written the following papers:

- “Domestic Household Religion” for the Oxford Handbook of Archaeology and the Bible.

- “Femininity and Masculinity: Greek for the Oxford Handbook of Sex, Gender and the Bible.

- Two Lectionaries on Mark 1:40-45 and Mark 2:1-10.

EMERITI

Dr. Walt Davis, professor of sociology of religion emeritus, received the first annual Desmond Tutu Award for courageous leadership at the Northern California Friends of Sabeel gala in October. Friends of Sabeel advocates for a just peace in Palestine/Israel. It honored Davis and First Presbyterian Church, San Anselmo, for their dedicated work on behalf of Palestinian rights. The pastor at First Presbyterian Church is Rev. Dr. Joanne Whitt, an SFTS board of trustee member who earned her Master of Divinity and Doctor of Ministry degrees from the seminary in 1997 and 2007, respectively. Davis was the general editor of Steadfast Hope: The Palestinian Quest for Just Peace, a publication of the Israel-Palestine Mission Network of the Presbyterian Church (USA). The document is used in many U.S. congregations and has been adapted for use in the Episcopal Church. Along with David Jones, also a member of the San Anselmo congregation, he wrote a three-week study plan of another IPMN publication, Kairos Palestine – A Moment of Truth, to be used in churches. He has inspired and supported the San Anselmo church in its ecumenical project, Keep Hope Alive, a program in partnership with the YMCA of East Jerusalem and the YWCA of Palestine. The project sends two groups to Palestine each year to plant olive trees in February and to harvest olives in October.

STAFF

Rev. Scott Clark (M.Div. ’07) began 2012-13 as associate dean of student life and chaplain. He previously served for one year in an interim capacity. Clark represents student concerns at all levels of the institution, from administrative cabinet to student services staff to maintenance staff. He has assisted students and student groups to bring their ideas to fruition. He has provided leadership for consistent and rich worship, and pastoral care to the members of the wider seminary community. “May I express my personal appreciation for the competence and grace with which Scott has moved into this new position, began to fill out the plan as it existed on paper with his own personal stamp, and brought all of his gifts and skills to bear in service both to students and to the larger institution,” said Dr. Elizabeth Liebert, dean of the seminary.
DR. POLLY COOTE: The heart of the SFTS community for over 30 years

By Anitra Kitts

On a hot afternoon after graduation last May, San Francisco Theological Seminary students, alumni, teachers and administrators gathered at Baird Hall to celebrate Dr. Polly Coote’s retirement. The room was crowded and the tables were overflowing with Western and Korean food and drink. Still, in the middle of the chaotic swirl of graduating, preparing to move, and recovering from final exams and papers, the community gathered to celebrate the woman who had just walked her final class of graduates off the field.

There was perhaps a sense of disbelief in the room that Polly had indeed retired since she had served in the registrar’s office, first as an assistant, and then as the registrar for over 30 years. After decades of bocci games, baklava baking parties, unexpected moments of satiric serenade from the Bonhoofers, Christmas carols and cookies parties, and marathon hikes from the campus to the ocean, Polly was wrapping up many of her numerous duties.

A master of eight languages, Polly is kind of surprised herself that she spent 30 some years as registrar, dean of student life and associate professor of Biblical Greek at SFTS. She earned her MA and PhD degrees at Harvard, and taught two years at Brown University before moving to the University of California, Berkeley, where she taught Yugoslav literature and Slavic folklore. After her family’s move to California, her husband, Dr. Robert Coote, joined the faculty at SFTS, where he was an Old Testament professor for 35 years.

Of teaching at UCB, she remarked, “I had a 1-year-old child and there was not a lot of money for childcare,” she recalled. “No one said back then that these were your choices. It turns out that an academic career at Berkeley isn’t something you can do in your spare time while the kid is napping.”

At first, after her family moved to the SFTS campus, Polly worked as an assistant to John Irvine, another legendary source of hospitality as head of the Office of Student Services. “I made copies of transcripts,” she recalled.

Before long Polly was co-teaching the Greek intersession class, and she’s been sharing her love of Biblical languages and learning ever since.

“For many students, the idea of learning Greek was a nightmare,” said Rev. Chandler Stokes (M.Div. ’82). “Polly maintained both appropriate expectations for their learning and deep compassion for their fear. She was both, ‘you can do this, it’s not that hard,’ and at the same time respective of their fear and anxiety.”

Rev. Dr. Neal Presa (M.Div. ’02), moderator of the 220th PC(USA) General Assembly, had taken Greek at another seminary, but really appreciated taking it again with Polly. “Her mastery of Greek, her ease and her humor helped me appreciate the language. She was so wise and she knew so many languages.”

In 2005, when the bookstore was closed and student morale was low, Audrey Wilkinson (M.Div. ’07) ap-
She always led the procession

A swirl of dignified colors
And at the front
She walked, a brown paper sack
Carefully folded with the brim rolled
Her crown.

“And it was more comfortable.”

proached Polly with the idea of refitting the space as a coffee shop and living room for the campus.

“Holy Grounds could not have come about without her cheerleading and support,” said Wilkinson. “She’s always been aware of what students needed. Polly is an amazing woman.”

At the party on graduation day, Temesgen Dabsu, a senior M.Div. student from Ethiopia, testified the support shown to him by Polly.

“She helped me to get over here,” he shared. “I had to come straight from Africa and she explained all the details on the visa requirements, the course requirements and what to do by what time. She is the first person I go to talk to and I have confidence in her advice for me.”

Jacob Li, another current M.Div. student, said, “I found her helpful. Any question you bring to her, she’ll find a satisfying answer. It could be about life, grad school, the seminary structure, policy, anything. The school will take a while to come up with someone to replace her.”

Rev. Scott Clark (M.Div. ’09), chaplain and associate dean of student life, was a student before he joined Polly on the SFTS staff.

“You are in truth the heart of this place,” Clark said during Polly’s party. “In ways many people will never know, your office is probably the place where students learned the most about how to be a pastor.”

“Nor, perhaps should anyone know,” Polly replied in laughter.

“Every time I go through the course again from alpha to omega I learn new things about Greek, about scripture, and about the people in the room,” Polly told the SFTS Board of Trustees. “That, for me, is fun, and as Ben and Jerry say, if it’s not fun, why do it? Could that be how you know it’s a call?”

In a way, members of the Class of 1987 are renegades. Sure, a few of these San Francisco Theological Seminary graduates occasionally make their way back to San Anselmo for Alumni Reunion Weekend in the spring. But it’s more likely that they mark their calendars for their own private reunion held every five years since they graduated 25 years ago.

For the fifth time, the Class of 1987 gathered at SFTS in August, setting up camp in Suzanna Baird Hall for a little reminiscing, prayer, support and catching up. This year’s group of 36 included graduates, spouses and partners, some of whom joined the reunion for the first time and many whom have participated all five times.

“We take over Baird and make it our home away from home as we share meals and participate in programs that we have scheduled, often with former and current SFTS professors joining us with their expertise,” shared Deana Reed. “We stay up late reminiscing about our times on campus and sharing the joys and heartaches of life and ministry. The chance for catching up as well as having directed time in study and reflection is important to us all.”

Reed notes that seminary is a life-changing time. Students are stretched, pulled and encouraged to open up to a bigger framework for understanding God, life and community than when they first came to SFTS. Those shared experiences provide opportunities for relationships with classmates, faculty and staff to develop touchstones during seminary days and beyond.

“Our lives have intertwined over the years as we have welcomed spouses, partners and the birth and growth of children into our worlds,” Reed said. “We just enjoy being together and celebrating life as we worship and play and study together.”

SFTS invites all graduates and former community members to return for Alumni Reunion Weekend April 11-13, 2013. Or you could follow the example of the Class of 1987 and coordinate your own special gathering.
1950 Bob Williams (BD) and his wife, Betsy, celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary last summer. They arrived at SFTS in 1947 as newlyweds so Bob could begin studies toward his Bachelor of Divinity degree. Betsy was very active in a campus support group for women, working alongside Susanna Baird, wife of then-president Dr. Jesse Baird. For the past 62 years, Bob has been a Class Steward for SFTS, helping members of his graduating class stay up to date with seminary events and news. “There is a glad satisfaction in keeping my peers informed and unified,” Bob wrote. “It is a joy to nurture those friendships as our lives move on – friendships that become more valuable through time.” In 1988, the Williams became members of the Montgomery Society by including SFTS in their estate plans. They also established the Robert and Elizabeth Helter Williams Scholarship Fund to support SFTS students called to ministry.

1953 Dick Jennings (BD, D.Min. ’77) and Shirley Jennings (MA) celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in August. After meeting as students at SFTS, they were married in Stewart Memorial Chapel in 1952 by Dr. Jesse Baird, the SFTS president at the time. There was some concern that the chapel might not be completed in time for the fall semester, but Baird pushed contractors with the Jennings’ wedding in mind and they were joined in holy matrimony for the first event in Stewart. “It must have worked,” writes Dick Jennings. “Shirley and I attended chapel services in the new building all through our last year at seminary. And our wedding reception was also the first event ever held at Alexander Hall, which was constructed at the same time as Geneva Hall.” The Jennings’ service to the church stretched 41 years in four states and eight presbyteries. They now live in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. “It feels good to remember that Shirley and I met each other at SFTS as well as getting married there,” Dick Jennings wrote. “We just wanted to share our reminiscences with the seminary that has been so important in our lives.”

1969 Wil Long (DTh) caught Protestant theology at Kaiserin Friedrich Schule in Germany from 1973-2000. Before moving to Europe, he was pastor at Culver City Presbyterian Church in Southern California from 1969-73. His theological education included Yale Divinity School from 1957-60, Princeton Theological Seminary in 1963 and Eberhard Karls University in Germany. He moved to the Bay Area in the ’60s for studies at SFTS and the Graduate Theological Union.

1969 Tom Rickert (MTh) says SFTS played an important role in preparing him for 40-plus years of work on social concerns, first as a community organizer and for decades in the field of promoting accessible public transportation for seniors and persons with disabilities throughout the world. In 1990, Rickert quit his position as manager of Accessible Services for San Francisco’s public transit agency in order to found Access Exchange International. Back then, there were virtually no transit systems accessible to disabled riders in Asia, Africa, Latin America or Eastern Europe. Access Exchange International (AEI) is a nonprofit agency that has promoted best practices in the field of accessible transit at workshops and conferences for transit planners and disability leaders in 30 countries, including pioneering meetings in China, Thailand, Vietnam, Russia and Malaysia, as well as South Africa, Kenya, and Tanzania. In Latin America, AEI has responded to invitations and led workshops in Brazil, Colombia, Argentina, Peru, Chile, Uruguay, Mexico, Guatemala, El Salvador, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica. Rickert and his wife, Susan, are active members of the Mission and Justice Committee of the United Methodist Church in San Francisco.

1971 Jerry Van Marter (M.Div.) received numerous awards both as a writer and director of the Presbyterian News Service during the Associated Church Press (ACP) annual awards banquet in May. The ACP is the oldest and largest Christian press association and stages yearly judging for its “Best of the Christian Press Awards.” Van Marter earned the Award of Excellence (first place) in the news service category for his story “PC(USA) relaxes constitutional prohibition of gay and lesbian ordination.” He received an Award of Merit (second place) in the Convention or Meeting Coverage category for “Fellowship of Presbyterians examines options for ‘differentiation’ from PC(USA).” The Presbyterian News Service took third in the news service category.

1971 Barry Boyer (M.Div.) has retired after more than 25 years of service at First Presbyterian Church of Chippewa Falls, Wis. His last day in the pulpit was May 20. Prior to moving to the Chippewa Falls church, Boyer served as associate pastor of the Glen Avon Presbyterian Church in Duluth, Minn., for seven years and at the Bayfield Presbyterian Church in Ashland for eight.

1979 Bradley C. Copeland (M.Div., D.Min. ’87) has been elected moderator of the PC(USA) General Assembly Permanent Judicial Commission. The judicial commission is the final authority of the church, analogous to U.S. Appellate Courts, deciding appealed issues of remedial cases such as misconduct as well as disciplinary cases which may involve offenses made by individuals. Copeland will act as the moderator for the next two years, when his six-year post on the 16-member commission will expire. He also serves as senior pastor of Magnolia Presbyterian Church, one of most venerable and iconic churches in Riverside, Calif. He believes the art of being a good pastor will be an asset while he serves on the judicial commission. “In the preamble to our Book of Discipline, we speak of our purpose of restoration and reconciliation,” he said. “And while we in the commission have ecclesiastical authority, people and diversity are always heard because issues are not black and white.”

Copeland admits that he finds it troubling in today’s Christian community that many believe there is only one valid viewpoint regarding contemporary issues. “And that is why we acknowledge as a church that people can think and that we should have dialogue on controversial issues.” The judicial commission as a forum provides an opportunity for relevant faith and even contemporary societal issues to be heard, not unlike those that are debated, discussed and argued throughout the country today, according to Copeland.

1980 Laura Mendenhall (M.Div.) was the recipient of the 2012 Ernest Trice Thompson Award. She received the award at the Presbyterian Outlook luncheon that was held during the 220th General Assembly (2012) of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). Mendenhall has served as Christian educator, pastor and, most recently, senior philanthropy advisor for the Texas Presbyterian Foundation. She may be most well known for her tenure as president of Columbia Theological Seminary. Jack Haberer, editor of the Presbyterian Outlook, said of Mendenhall, “Laura has been such an extraordinary presence at Columbia Seminary through new faculty appointments, new construction and renewal of the campus. The reputation of that institution for making great pastors was enlarged by her tenure there.”

1984 C. Dale German (D.Min.) was been honored by The Oklahoma newspaper’s editorial board for his letter that exemplified a timely, fair, accurate and cogent viewpoint. His “Foundational to faith” letter was published July 20. German, 70, is a retired pastor in the Church of the Nazarene having served in Texas, Arizona, California and Oregon. He also taught at Nazarene Theological College in Brisbane, Australia. Currently he is employed as an Oklahoma City Ambassador. You can find him driving water taxi boats on Bricktown Canal.

The letter:
I’m not a scientist, but as a theologically schooled retired pastor I’d like to broaden “A matter of faith vs. reason” (Scissor Tales, July 14). Detection of the Higgs boson is an amazingly intriguing scientific advance. May it yield ever more clues of the origin of matter! My comment has to do with the notion that faith and reason are incompatible. Reason is foundational to faith. Reason gives substance to faith. Faith without reason could become belief in total nonsense. The origin of matter, whatever it is, comes from something else, whatever that is. Intelligent design doesn’t exclude a big bang “theory,” and a big bang theory need not exclude an imponderable intelligent designer. Let the believer in God be excited about glimpsing a “God particle” and not rule out a big bang theory. And let the scientific God particle chasers not rule out the possibility of intelligent design behind the Higgs boson. It need not be “a super-colliding matter of faith vs. reason, the God partisans vs. the God particle chasers.” The dichotomy is not mutually exclusive. No matter how we got here, human life itself is too complex to be random and purposeless. It’s reasonable to believe by faith that only Intelligence could have put all of this together. Humanity’s greater task is to find out not only how, but why.
New breakthrough book connects Gospels, Torah and Quran

Dr. Brian Brown, who earned his Doctor of Ministry degree from San Francisco Theological Seminary in 1972, is contributing editor of the new book Three Testaments: Torah, Gospel and Quran.

For the first time, Brown and his colleagues present together the texts of the Torah, Gospels and Quran, inviting readers to examine the interdependence of the Scriptures that are central to Jews, Christians and Muslims. Connecting these three faith traditions, the book is a breakthrough in scholarship and an excellent source for interfaith studies.

The foreword by Amir Hussain, editor of the Journal of the American Academy of Religion, sets the tone by recognizing the value of understanding the differences as well as appreciating the mutual implication of stories that overlap in content and meaning. Ellen Frankel and Marc Zvi Brettler represent the Jewish community, Henry Carrigan and David Bruce speak for Protestants and Catholics, with Laleh Bakhtiar and Nevin Reda presenting traditional and progressive Islamic points of view.

Brown, ordained by the United Church of Canada, adds an international perspective to illustrate the timeless universality of the material under consideration. He credits his wife Jenny Gosine, whose family roots are in India, for helping him develop a world view on faith.

“Brian Brown and his associates offer a deep investigation of the common as well as the distinctive features of the monotheistic world faiths present in the Torah, the Gospel and the Quran, including some possible influence in each by Zoroastrianism,” said Dr. Max L. Stackhouse, author of God and Globalization and professor emeritus at Princeton Theological Seminary. “Well aware that the evidence is not conclusive in many cases, he courageously and suggestively charts out the dots that can become connected as further research dictates, thereby setting forth a possible map of the partially hidden root system that feeds the major branches of the flourishing world religions.”

As possibly a definitive landmark of the 21st century, Three Testaments: Torah, Gospel and Quran presents the scriptural texts under license from the Jewish Publication Society, Sheed & Ward and Kazi Publications Inc., preeminent publishing houses of the Jewish, Catholic and Islamic traditions. By word count the material is 70 percent Scripture, 15 percent commentary and 15 percent contextual material relating to recent research showing the Zoroastrian roots of the scriptures of Abraham’s family. The particular textual versions are all 21st century publications from the three traditions, another first.

Brown recently retired from ministry to focus on writing after serving three small Niagara Falls congregations for nearly a decade. Each church experienced growth and redevelopment, including one congregation that doubled during a pastoral transition. This is a book to pick up for both practical purposes and insightful and inspiring commentary on the ways social media is changing our culture and the church. Learn how social media can benefit the church community of Faith: Old First Presbyterian Church 1849-1999.

1993 Stephen Taber (MA in Values) is a lawyer and elder at Old First Presbyterian Church, San Francisco. He uses his legal knowledge on behalf of Old First Presbyterian Church and of many nonprofits. He is also legal counsel for both the Presbytery of San Francisco and the Presbytery of Sacramento. Taber and his wife, Sarah, generously host many Old First Presbyterian Church gatherings, from educational forums to holiday open houses. Taber is the author of the prize-winning history Pioneer Community of Faith: Old First Presbyterian Church 1849-1999.

1995 Bruce Reyes-Chow (M.Div.) reveals how social media can benefit the church in his latest book The Definitive-ish Guide for Using Social Media in the Church. He weaves practical how-to tips with a convincing rationale for why social media matters for the church. Social media novices will find an accessible introduction and ideas for getting started while more experienced users will discover new ways to use social media in congregations. Readers will learn from Reyes-Chow’s experiences managing information overload and navigating social media issues during a pastoral transition. This is a book to pick up for both practical purposes and insightful and inspiring commentary on the ways social media is changing our culture and the church. Learn how social media allows Christians to be in the world in new, powerful and God-honoring ways. The Definitive-ish Guide for Using Social Media in the Church can be read on any e-reader, tablet, smartphone or computer and is... available on Amazon.com, BN.com and iBooks. For more information about the book, visit www.shook-foilbooks.com. Fully utilizing the eBook medium, this book will be updated regularly, so you can have the confidence that when you buy it you are getting up-to-date information. Reyes-Chow was also a featured speaker at Wild Goose West last summer in Oregon.

1999 Musimbi Kanyoro (D.Min.) is president and CEO of Global Fund for Women, which has offices in San Francisco and New York City. Global Fund for Women is a publicly supported grantmaking foundation that invests in women-led organizations to advance human rights. A native of Kenya, Kanyoro is an influential advocate for women and girls worldwide. Prior to joining the Global Fund for Women, Kanyoro served as the director of the Packard Foundation’s Population and Reproductive Health program, where she led efforts to expand the foundation’s grantmaking to include girls’ education and women’s leadership. Prior to that, she served as general secretary (CEO) of the World YWCA in Geneva, Switzerland (1998–2007), and as executive secretary for the Women’s Program of the Lutheran World Federation (1988–98). She is a founding member of the Global Coalition on Women and AIDS—an alliance focused on strengthening AIDS programming for women and girls. A minister by training, Kanyoro has been a visiting scholar at Harvard Divinity School. She has published extensively on gender issues and received many awards throughout her career including the Kenya Government Presidential Award for leadership and the Women's Funding Network’s Changing the Face of Philanthropy Award.

2001 Timothy Shipe (M.Div.) is a supervisory candidate in Clinical Pastoral Education at St. Joseph Medical Center in Tacoma, Wash.

2002 Paul Boles (M.Div.) has been appointed to the faculty of Azusa Pacific University as assistant professor of church history. He received his PhD in the history of Christianity from Claremont Graduate University, where he completed his dissertation on the creation of a context for meaning to occur in the preaching of third-century Church father Origen of Alexandria. He continues to pursue his interests in historical preaching and the history of biblical interpretation. Boles is an ordained minister in the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.), has worked as a solo pastor and as a hospice chaplain, and teaches preaching at the seminary level.

2003 Deborah Matthews (DSFS, M.Div./MA ’04) joins youth-advocacy agency The LeaderShop as marketing manager after volunteering in the office for several months. Her advocacy for young adults began as a youth group leader while a college student and continued through fifteen years of leading youth programming in churches and communities in four states, including as a pastor in two churches. Deborah comments, “While it appears I’ve changed careers, I’m still using all the tools and formation as a religious leader to communicate to the community the exciting work The LeaderShop does to build confidence, knowledge and leadership in teens. I’m thrilled to be a part of the team.” She is an ordained teaching elder in the PC(USA).

2004 Will McGarvey (M.Div.) has been named interim executive director of the Interfaith Council of Contra Costa County. “The work of the Interfaith Council is so important here in Contra Costa County,” McGarvey said. “Our work supporting Winter Nights Shelter, the chaplaincy in the Juvenile Detention Facility and our Social Justice Alliance provide an opportunity for people of faith to work together to make our county a better place. I’m happy to be able to help the executive committee focus on our mission, and organize our committees to help the member congregations work toward greater understanding among our faith groups. This is among the most important pieces of work during this time of increasing religiously motivated violence.” McGarvey has served as pastor at Community Presbyterian Church of Pittsburg, Calif., for the last eight years. CPC shares ministry with First Congregational Church of Antioch (UCC). McGarvey has long been active in interfaith circles, including the early meetings that organized interfaith chaplains for the 2002 Salt Lake City Winter Olympics.

2004 Jessica Konig (MA) earned a degree in philosophical theology from the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, Calif. She also earned an MA in Philosophy and Graduate Certificate in Women’s and Gender Studies at Duquesne University, and was accepted to the university’s PhD program in philosophy this fall. She received the Carlin Book Prize in Philosophy from the University of San Diego in 2001 before attending SFTS. Most recently, she presented a paper, “The Matrilineal Servitude Statute and Miscegenation Laws: An Essay on their Impact on Notions of Motherhood and Female Sexuality,” at the Eastern Society for Women in Philosophy Conference on Women in Philosophy: Why Race and Gender Still Matter at Notre Dame of Maryland University. She is interested in feminist philosophy generally, and notions of identity and gendered subjectivity specifically.

2007 Derrick Weston (M.Div.) has been hired as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Yellow Springs, Ohio, as well as director of Antioch College’s Coretta Scott King Center for Cultural and Intellectual Freedom. Weston is interested in using the Coretta Scott King Center as a platform for dialogue on difficult issues such as diversity, tolerance, peacemaking and justice — issues he says people give lip service to but, like self-segregation, often remain the status quo. The movement for change goes back to the philosophies of Martin Luther King, Jr. and his “beloved community,” a community of equals. Weston is on the SFTS Alumni Council.

2007 Rebecca Barnes-Davies (wife of M.Div. grad Peter Barnes-Davies) was among the representatives of Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) environmental programs at the White House in September. She attended a “Greening America’s Congregations” event sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency’s “ENERGY STAR” program and the White House’s Office of Faith-Based and Neighborhood Partnerships. During the event, Rebecca Barnes-Davies, the PC(USA)’s associate for environmental ministries, participated in a panel in which she described the denomination’s Earth Care Congregations program as one model for Christian communities to engage in energy efficiency. As a community member at SFTS, Rebecca was the PC(USA) Hunger Action Enabler on campus.

2008 Mark Shaw (MATS) wrote a new book entitled Stations Along the Way. This true story chronicles the spiritual transformation of former Hitler youth leader Ursula Martens. Based on Ursula’s diary, this compelling biography describes how, consumed with guilt and shame over having been used by the Nazis during WWII when Adolf Hitler swore to control her and other youngsters “cradle to grave,” Ursula travels to America, where she experiences prejudice similar to that forced upon the Jews in Nazi Germany. Confused about what lies ahead, she suddenly discovers self-forgiveness in the most unlikely of places — through the love of three Holocaust survivors. One has romantic intentions; the other two accept her despite her past. As God becomes the essence of her life, Ursula turns full circle from worshipping the Swastika to worshipping the cross. Shaw is the author of more than 20 books, including biographies of Thomas Merton, Melvin Belli, Jonathan Pollard and Mike Tyson.

2011 Natasha Hicks (M.Div.) is receiving support from a PC(USA) debt assistance program as she answers a call to serve as part-time solo pastor of Mount View Presbyterian Church, a 50-member church in an unincorporated area of Seattle. Hicks was featured in a Presbyterian News Service article about the debt assistance program and how it has helped her transition from seminary to ministry. Hicks was a recipient of the Presbyterian Study Grant in seminary, which led to connections with the Transformational Leadership Debt Assistance Program (TLDA). The TLDA program is designed to assist seminary graduates who serve in temporary or part-time pastoral positions in churches of 150 members or less or in emerging worshiping communities. The program provides forgivable loans that can be applied to their education debt. After completion of an 18-month period of service, the loan is forgiven. Here’s what Hicks had to say about the program: “The school debt keeps you looking in the rearview mirror in some ways, so having the assistance helps me to have a more forward-looking perspective of where God is leading me and also the church. How do we become a light in this community, how do we love our neighbors, how do we invest in the children and youth and families in this community?” she asks. “How are we being a church that nurtures and helps people to grow in their faith?”

2013 Jeffrey V. O’Grady (D.Min.) has been elected to the Princeton Theological Seminary board of trustees. He is pastor and head of staff of San Marino Com-
of color within the Synod of the Pacific. Begun in 1991, REAPS is one of the few continuing education entities within the PC(USA) that is conceived and conducted by pastors and faculty of color. Earlier this year, REAPS representatives and SFTS faculty agreed to partner in nurturing and supporting these pastors through the APS programs.

In his interviews with the SFTS search committee, Choy was urged to bring back and expand on the D.Min. emphasis on Feminist Perspectives. He has already initiated conversations with members of the Justice for Women Working Group of the (U.S.) National Council of Churches, who have responded positively with a number of suggestions for updating the program for a new generation of leaders.

The SFTS search committee also encouraged Choy to enhance the Seminary’s course offerings with subjects he has taught at other theological institutions: strategic pastoral leadership, congregational leadership in times of change and transformation, racism and white privilege, and cross-cultural ministry. He plans to offer a “Culturally-Attentive Conflict Management” course during the APS Summer Session in 2013.

Choy believes it’s crucial to expand SFTS partnerships beyond current relationships with Seattle University, Marylhurst University and seminaries in Korea. As a visiting professor of ministry at McCormick, he helped develop its Executive Leadership Certificate Program, which equips congregational and denominational leaders for the practice of ministry in today’s changing landscape. Already this fall, the SFTS faculty has approved his proposal for a cross-registration partnership through which D.Min. students can complete course work for credit at both SFTS and McCormick. The McCormick faculty is voting on this soon.

Through his service on the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) Advisory Group on Theological Education in Asia and the Pacific, he hopes to help SFTS contribute to the ongoing nurture of leaders in partner churches.

“What kind of opportunities might APS offer?” Choy asked. “Being strategically bifocal is about vigilance as well as vision. I hope to vigilantly and diligently pay attention to the needs of colleagues in ministry which SFTS seeks to serve.”

Choy believes it’s crucial to expand SFTS partnerships beyond current relationships with Seattle University, Marylhurst University and seminaries in Korea. As a visiting professor of ministry at McCormick, he helped develop my strength by trusting in each team member’s differences. This firm conviction that we are different helps us form a strong trust in each other, and our differences require us to listen to each member’s feedback about the services we plan.”

Creativity plays an important role in developing unique services. Tad Hopp, a second-year Master of Divinity student who serves as a chaplain’s assistant, comes from a theatrical background – he once tried out for American Idol. He appreciates the way creativity is nourished and encouraged through Worship Lab.

“I like letting my creative juices flow and Worship Lab allows that to happen,” Hopp said. “I think it gives the student body here a chance to explore different styles and methods of worship, which is more and more important as we enter a world where the traditional idea of a worship service is changing. As future leaders in the church, it is important that we are able to come up with meaningful and impactful worship services that don’t necessarily fit the traditional worship paradigm.”

Rev. Scott Clark (M.Div. ’09), chaplain and associate dean of student life at SFTS, points out that Worship Lab connects with what a good number of local congregations are trying to do, too.

“We are all faithfully trying to innovate and come up with new, life-giving ways to worship that flow out of the traditions of Reformed Worship,” Clark said. “This is all part of equipping folks for new, imaginative and faithful ministry for the 21st century. I hope that folks beyond the campus feel welcome to come and worship and experience what we’re doing here.”

Several SFTS professors and students are using Worship Lab as a component of their academic studies. Rev. Dr. Jana Childers’ Reformed Worship class has the option to attend Worship Lab and write a report on each service. First-year M.Div. student Alexander Wendeheart crafted a worship service for All Saints’ Day, inspired by his Celtic spirituality and theology class. And last semester, Dr. Annette Schellenberg’s Old Testament Exegesis class designed and led a Worship Lab that brought to life a challenging text from the Hebrew Scriptures.

Rev. Dr. James McDonald, the seminary president, believes it is critical that SFTS students are prepared to help fulfill God’s purposes in the world. Worship Lab has emerged as a unique tool in this preparation.

“Seminaries are laboratories for incubating religious leaders who have been called by God to encourage and challenge communities to live out the Good News of Jesus Christ,” McDonald said. “Seminaries need to be places of hope and energy for a transformed church capable of healing a broken world. This is my vision for SFTS.”

church that was purposefully made to be common-looking and without fancy or flair; visits to traditional markets, neighborhoods and beautiful parklands and open spaces.

Korea is also known as the Land of the Morning Calm. “That image is exactly what you feel when you walk outside in the morning,” McDonald said. “There are lots of mountains and the Han River is a large watershed that runs through Korea and Seoul. The countryside is spectacular and awe inspiring.”

The trip to Korea also affirmed the already deep connection between Korean Presbyterian Churches and SFTS. Of the 50 million people in Korea, approximately 30 percent are Christian. The Presbyterian Church has become a strong presence in Korean society. SFTS has a long history of welcoming students from Korea, where an appreciation for strong academic and theological training allows them to stretch their own learning in ministry within their own context.

“I sense a new openness,” McDonald said. “Koreans want to be thinking together with non-Koreans about the nature of the changes that we all face together. This is a very exciting prospect for everyone.”

At the conclusion of their week-long visit, bows of respect and handshakes marked the end of a well-purposed and deeply meaningful journey. Rev. Kang extended an invitation for SFTS to participate in next year’s conference. “Thank you Rev. Kang. We accept.”

REV. JACKIE LEONARD:
SFTS alum supports seminary through endowed chair

By Kay Carney

Jackie Leonard, a PC(USA) minister, SFTS alumna (M.Div. ’88) and seven-year member of the SFTS board of trustees, remembers her call to ministry and the major event that led to her decision to attend seminary.

A graduate of the University of Nevada, she moved to San Francisco for graduate school in theater and returned to Reno in 1977. Three months later Leonard’s life would be forever changed after her brother was killed by a drunk driver. “Dealing with my brother’s death caused me to reevaluate my own life.”

“St John’s pastor, Rev. Bill Barrett (BD ’55), preached on Romans 8:38-39 the first Sunday after my brother’s death. When Bill preached on that pericope, the world shifted for me. I still had a lot of grief work to do but I realized that my world had not ended.”

Leonard became very involved in the life of St. John’s Church and began to look at new career choices. Through a process of discernment, she realized that she had a call to ministry. “When I told Bill this, he said ‘No. You don’t go to seminary and go into ministry until it is the last thing on your career list.’ And I told him that it was. Then I began my journey to seminary,” stated Leonard.

“A friend and I made a trip through a blizzard to attend a Frontiers in Ministry conference at SFTS. After this trip through snow and rain, we arrived on campus. The grass was green, the sky was blue, and the tulip trees were blooming. I knew I had come home,” said Leonard. She enrolled at SFTS in 1984.

Leonard first got to know the Rices at SFTS where Howard was professor of ministry and chaplain. Rice became a mentor and friend and preached at her ordination in October 1988. “Howard preached on the Samaritan Woman at the Well, and I have no memory of what he said. What I DO remember is the laying on of hands, and his hands on my head and the other ministers and elders laying their hands on my shoulders,” added Leonard. Howard Rice passed away in 2010.

Leonard credits the Rices for having a lasting impact on her ministry. In 2002, the Rices were in Reno following a Companions on the Inner Way spiritual retreat at Lake Tahoe. “I was having a bizarre experience with various physical problems. I think Howard and I both knew that it was MS., and I was diagnosed on September 12, 2002, several days after the Rices had returned home. Nancy was a wonderful support to my mother and now, Howard and I had one more thing in common.”

In honor of the Rice family, Leonard has endowed the Rice Family Chair of Christian Spirituality at SFTS. Doing so will keep their legacies alive for generations to come. “I am more than halfway toward my pledge of $2 million,” she added.

“My time at SFTS was one of the best times of my life. It challenged me intellectually and spiritually. The preaching was the best I’ve ever heard. I began a love affair with JS Bach; I made lifelong friends.” Leonard added, “I hope that all students of SFTS will experience seminary life as rich and life-changing as mine was. To this end, I have served on the Board of Trustees and continue to make a financial investment in the seminary. It is my prayer that we will graduate students with a passion for the proclamation of the Gospel and the willingness to give back to the institution that has formed them.”

Scott Clark
Rev. Scott Clark’s connection to SFTS is multifaceted. He earned his Master of Divinity from SFTS in 2009, then served as program manager for the Program in Christian Spirituality. In 2011, he began serving as chaplain and associate dean of student life. Before attending seminary, Clark practiced law, and it is his organizational skills, work ethic and integrity that make him perfectly suited for the dual role in which he now serves. “When I started giving to the seminary as an alum, it was mainly an expression of gratitude to SFTS,” Clark said. “Now, in my current job, I have the added blessing of being able to see firsthand the remarkable ways the Holy Spirit is moving in and through our students.”

Jillian Robinson
Jillian Robinson, president of the SFTS Auxiliary, grew up Presbyterian, attended Presbyterian-affiliated College of Wooster and has been a member of Sleepy Hollow Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo, Calif., for more than 20 years. She’s served on numerous committees for the Presbytery of the Redwoods, but her passion is preparation for ministry. In her role as Auxiliary president, Robinson helps connect the outside world to SFTS students. She’s also an annual donor. “If everyone puts a little in the pot then you get strength in numbers,” she said. “I believe in lifelong learning. Since this seminary is in my backyard, I want to support it in all the ways I can.”

Peter van Bever
Peter van Bever loves to sing. Retired from mortgage banking, he sings in the choir at First Presbyterian Church in Portland, Ore., and is on the Portland Opera board. As an eight-year member of the SFTS Board of Trustees, now serving as chair, van Bever also sings the praises of the only Presbyterian seminary in the West and supports it as a monthly donor. “I believe in and value the theological education SFTS provides its students,” van Bever said. “I chose to donate using the monthly automatic credit card charge because it’s easy, automatic and painless. I wish more would choose this option.” Among the many ways van Bever continues to support SFTS is serving on the new Strategic Planning Council.

Calvary Presbyterian Church

The partnership between Calvary Presbyterian Church and SFTS runs deeply, dating back 141 years when seminary students first began meeting at the church in San Francisco. Dr. William Anderson Scott, Calvary’s organizing pastor in 1854, helped found SFTS. Former Calvary pastors Rev. Dr. James Emerson and Rev. Dr. Laird Stuart served as interim presidents at SFTS. Current Board of Trustees member Marion Stanton is a Calvary member.

In 2012, SFTS was blessed to receive a $25,000 grant from Calvary to stage a joint lecture with the church on the topic of Faith and Public Life. The lecture will feature a keynote speaker whose life has demonstrated different ways of uniting faith and service to others.
The Montgomery Society recognizes friends and alumni who have named SFTS within a planned gift. A donor qualifies for membership through a bequest, a trust or annuity, and/or lifetime gifts to the Seminary of $10,000 or more. We honor the faithful support these special friends have contributed to the ministry of SFTS.

Ellie Krivin
Ellie Krivin’s intimate involvement with SFTS began in 1976 when she became a member of the board of trustees. She served in that capacity until 1986, and was on the president’s council from 1997 to 2000. Ellie was an asset to the leadership of SFTS, and her love for the seminary did not end at the conclusion of her terms of service. Ellie established a Charitable Remainder Trust that benefited seminary student support upon her death in 2009.

Arlene Coddington was not a seminary student, nor was she married to one, nor was she the mother of one. Arlene's connection to SFTS was through the Presbyterian Church and her desire to help seminary students. Her mother served on the SFTS auxiliary in 1938 as a representative from Vallejo Presbyterian Church, and years later Arlene continued the tradition of service on the SFTS auxiliary board and was president from 1974-77. Upon her death in 2007, distributions from her estate created the Franke-Coddington Scholarship Fund.

IN HONOR OF

Esteeemed faculty, alumni and churches affiliated with SFTS help fulfill the seminary’s mission to shape a future in tune with God’s purposes for the world. The seminary thanks those who give in honor of these Christian educators and institutions.

BROWNE BARR: Pilot & entrepreneur who applauds charitable trusts

By Phil Murphy

You can see San Francisco Theological Seminary Trustee Browne Barr’s destiny as a private pilot written into the locations of the six truck stops he used to own.

If you start at the Gallup, N. Mex., stop, you have to drive 706 miles to get to the next one in Gordon, Texas. To reach the other four, it’s 582 miles northeast to Denver, Colo., 677 miles farther northeast to Des Moines, Iowa, 308 miles due east to Joliet, Ill., and 300 miles from there to Black River Falls, Wis.

Now semi-retired at 80, Barr wanted face-to-face conversations with his employees at his six truck stops, which provided fuel, food, respite and repairs to truckers. On average, his truck stops employed 125 people each, operating 24/7.

Using airlines made no sense to him, so at 30, he got his pilot’s license. During the 40 years or so he ran his business, he owned five planes: two Barons and three Bonanzas. “I crashed only once,” he deadpanned, adding that a landing gear collapsed at touchdown and penetrated the plane’s fuel tank. He slid to a halt, shoved open the jammed cockpit door and escaped uninjured to the runway.

As he approached retirement, he learned of the advantages offered by charitable remainder trusts. A trust specialist showed him how this type of trust could help him and his wife Dorothy, since deceased, add to their retirement income from the sale of the Black River Falls operation in Wisconsin, the last of his truck stops.

Instead of the conventional sale he had used to sell the five others stops, he placed half of the Black River Falls assets—its facilities included a store, a restaurant, diesel and gas stations, and a garage—into a charitable remainder trust for SFTS’s benefit. Because the ultimate destination of the trust’s assets is the seminary, the Barrs escaped capital gains tax on the assets placed in the trust. They also received payments from the trust for life, earned an immediate income tax deduction, and had the satisfaction of providing for SFTS, which they believe in strongly and to which they were linked by family ties.

His uncle and namesake Browne Barr was dean of SFTS from 1977-83. His brother Robert was vice president of development and then acting president from 1984-85. Browne became an SFTS trustee in 2006 when his wife Dorothy left the board because of illness.

The plainspoken Barr is enthusiastic about his charitable remainder trust, which he established about 20 years ago. “It’s just a great deal,” he said. “It helps both the individual who sets it up and the seminary.”

The Barrs selected the minimum payment required by law—5 percent—and an option that prevents invasion of principal if the trust earns less than that. This conservative approach allowed the Barrs’ charitable trust to hold its value despite the 2008 economic meltdown and other vagaries of the marketplace.

“I think highly of SFTS,” he said. “I feel that all churches need to get their acts together, learn to get along, and bring peace to the world. The churches have a long way to go. The seminary is the starting point.”

It was always of great significance to him that in his mayoral year (1973-74) the local Jewish rabbi conducted a civic service in the synagogue in his honor, not only recognizing him as the mayor of the city, but also acknowledging him as the minister of the local Methodist Church. Williams saw this as a tangible act of ecumenism. He served as president of the Australian Council of Churches International Affairs Committee. She was appointed pastor of Citrus Heights United Methodist Church last year but stepped down in January after she was diagnosed with necrotizing fasciitis. The bacterial infection, also known as flesh-eating disease, developed in an abscess on her back and led to a coma, pneumonia and other complications. Before seminary, she graduated from UC Berkeley with a master’s degree in early childhood education and added a teaching credential from California State University, San Francisco. She taught preschool and after-school programs in Redwood City and oversaw day care and other nonmilitary services at Moffett Field Naval Air Station.
